CAMPAIGN DRAWS BIG CROWD

Mokena Business Men Trade and Advertising Program Going Strong

The largest crowd ever seen in Mokena on a Saturday night was in town last Saturday, when the newly formed Mokena Business Men's Association held their first prize award night in connection with their trade stimulating and advertising campaign now in progress.

The prize award of $20 being unclaimed, the prize went over to this week which makes the award $40. A. M. Benson held the $20 award coupon but arrived too late to redeem it.

The trade coupons which are being issued by all the members of the association are greatly in demand. The Mokena business men all report an increase in business since they started their trade stimulating and advertising campaign and the fact has been proven to them that advertising pays real dividends and that in order to attract trade business men must advertise and must offer prices that will meet all out-side competition. The business man who does not advertise cannot expect much patronage from the public.

People as a rule, trade where quality goods and prices are advertised. Last Saturday night about 600 people were in Mokena. The stores were crowded with shoppers.

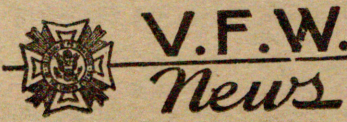

Many new customers were seen and also people who had never shopped here before.

There has been an increase in purchases made during the rest of the week and the interest is growing daily.

This week-end the business men of Mokena are offering many specials as listed in their advertisements appearing on the Mokena page in this issue.

At a special meeting of the Mokena Business Men's association held Tuesday night the members were decidedly well pleased with the results realized thus far.

There is no reason why Mokena cannot be made as good a shopping center as any other live wire community. Trade in Mokena.

And The Dog Really Came Back

We often hear the phrase "and the cat came back" but in this case it is the dog who came back.

Last Wednesday, Rene Guindon of Mokena missed his dog and Sunday when he and his family went to Tinley Park to visit friends, he was surprised to have the dog meet him.

The Guindon's formerly lived in Tinley Park, and the dog walked from Mokena back to his old home in Tinley Park. The dog was brought back to Mokena and left again, and Thursday afternoon friends in Tinley Park again notified the Guindons, that the dog was at their home in Tinley Park.

HIGH LIGHTS ON LEGISLATIVE CONSIDERATIONS

By Lottie Holman O'Neill

October 28th Governor Horner issued a call for the first special session of the 59th General assembly. Only subjects included in the call can be considered. Main reason for same is to comply with Federal request for concurrence in the Federal Social Security program to be passed by the states. First bill on the list is Unemployment Insurance. It is now being considered and proponents will be heard next week, beginning Tuesday the 12th. As was to be expected, the government places a heavy penalty on Illinois for not complying with the order. In other words, it is stated that the government is "powerfully persuading" the state. The method of persuasion will take too much space for explanation but suffice it to say that the big stick which has been held over the legislature from Washington is much in evidence.

The Old Age Pension bill which was passed last June in this state required some minor changes to meet the requirements of the Federal act. It was planned to make such changes at this special session. It was therefore a surprise to those of us in favor of this form of aid to find that the bill now before the House practically rewrites the act passed last June and includes some provisions which we find it impossible to accept. Space again forbids my going into detail but I will say that it is difficult to believe that a party which campaigned on its concern for the forgotten man and humanitarianism could foster such a pauperizing bill as now in Springfield. We have presented amendments in the hope of eliminating some of the more drastic provisions. I suggest that those interested secure copies of the bill for themselves and see what is aimed at by the present state administration.

In the administration of the old age pension we come to another phase of the session. That is the method. Shall we continue to administer relief according to the lines of the Emergency Relief Commission or shall we get back to the local community as in the past years. We have had such unfortunate results with the IERC which will of course cease to exist before long, that we rebel at setting up another structure of like nature for handling old age, mother's pensions and other forms of aid. Another plan is being worked out and we hope will become the law. This will bring the whole matter back home.

Aid for schools comes to the front this week. A Chicago Democratic member introduced a resolution calling on the Governor to call a concurrent special session for considering schools. His object was aiding the Chicago schools. Another resolution was immediately put in from the Republican side asking that this be done and including the down-state schools and the deficiency payments overdue on the state fund. This would include the seven million about which so much was said during the regular session without result. We are hoping the Governor will grant this request. It will add practically nothing to the cost of the session as the same overhead will take care of both sessions.

Mokena Defeats Crete Team

Last Tuesday, November 13, Mokena defeated Crete in a game of basketball at Crete. As all the rooters of Mokena know, it has always been the teams' aim to beat Crete. In the past two years neither team of Crete has been defeated by Mokena but last Tuesday both the grade and high school teams of Mokena broke that record. In the grade school game it was necessary to play 3 minutes overtime. "Red" Eytitt made the winning point by sinking a free throw and making the score 10 to 11. The high school team came through with a score of 23 to 6.

On Friday, November 15, the Mokena boys play Beecher here. It is hoped that there will be a large crowd out to see this game.

Stealing Rabbits Latest Form of Theft

The newest kind of theft resorted to in this section since chicken and cattle stealing has let up, is the theft of rabbits.

Mrs. Rogers residing near the Hickory Creek bridge south of Mokena, reports that seven rabbits were stolen from her place about 6 o'clock Tuesday morning of this week. She heard a noise in the yard and upon investigation, saw a car parked on the bridge. When she headed for the car, the driver suddenly stepped on the gas and drove hurriedly away. Whether the car was operated by the thieves or not, is not known.

Keep your rabbits under lock and key.

HOW PADDY WARNED LIGHTFOOT

IT WAS a queer partnership, that partnership between Lightfoot and Paddy, but it was a good partnership. They had been the best of friends for a long time. Paddy had always been glad to have Lightfoot visit his pond. To tell the truth, he was rather fond of handsome Lightfoot. You know, Paddy is himself not at all handsome. On land he is a rather clumsy looking fellow and really homely. So he admired Lightfoot greatly. That is one reason why he proposed that they be partners.

Lightfoot himself thought the idea a splendid one. He spent that night browsing not far from Paddy's pond. With the coming of daylight he lay down under some thick growing hemlock trees near the upper end of Paddy's pond. It was a quiet, peaceful day. It was so quiet and peaceful and beautiful that it was hard to believe that hunters with terrible guns were searching the Green Forest for beautiful Lightfoot. But they were, and Lightfoot knew that sooner or later one of them would be sure to visit Paddy's pond. So, though he rested and took short naps all through that beautiful day, he was anxious. He couldn't help but be.

The next morning found Lightfoot back in the same place. But this morning he took no naps. He rested, but all the time he was watchful and alert. A feeling of uneasiness possessed him. He felt in his bones that danger in the shape of a hunter with a terrible gun was not far distant.

But the hours slipped away and little by little he grew less uneasy. He began to hope that that day would prove as peaceful as the previous day had been. Then suddenly there was a sharp report from the farther end of Paddy's pond. It was almost like a pistol shot. However, it wasn't a pistol shot. It wasn't a shot at all. It was the slap of Paddy's broad tail on the surface of the water. Instantly Lightfoot was on his feet. He knew just what that meant. He knew that Paddy had seen or heard or smelled a hunter.

It was even so. Paddy had heard a dry stick snap. It was a very tiny snap but it was enough to warn Paddy. With only his head above the water he had watched in the direction from which that sound had come. Presently, stealing quietly along towards the pond, a hunter had come in view. Instantly Paddy had brought his broad tail down on the water with all his force. He knew that Lightfoot would know that that meant danger. Then Paddy had dived, and swimming under water, had sought the safety of his house. He had done his part and there was nothing more he could do.

DAVID

By ANNE CAMPBELL

HE WAS a happy boy who did not know One hour of disillusionment and strife.

All unacquainted with our deepest woe, The bluest skies hung over his young life.

For him there were no tears, but only joy. He never will be called upon to share

The bitter loss that robbed us of our boy, And gave us such a troubled load to bear.

Youth's mirror was untarnished; he who gazed With such clear eyes to futures bright with bliss.

Will never live to see the hopes he raised Come tumbling 'round his head. . . . And we who miss

His boyish laughter ringing through the halls, His happy plans, so confident and gay, Approach more eagerly the crystal walls Of heaven, where we all will meet some day.

Dear boy, whose spirit lingers in the rooms Where you lived joyfully for fifteen years, Forgive us if we shadow your bright plumes By giving way to grief and hopeless tears.

Only one ray of comfort shines for us. Our day is long, and heavy is the night,

But your brave soul finds heaven glorious, And where you are is happiness and light!

Baffling Mystery Solved; Killer Wore Horseshoes

Not long ago France was baffled by an unusual murder mystery. Within a week three friends, two men and a woman, were stabbed to death on the border of a small town. All were armed and no struggle had taken place. The soggy earth around them showed only the hoof-prints of a horse.

Later the murderer, a woman, was discovered. She had disarmed the victims' suspicion by a friendly chat, hence the surprise attack. And she had concealed her sandals, fitted with horseshoes, by a long cloak.—Collier's Weekly.

And How?

Love of money makes the world go round. All men seek to win it.

I FEEL FINE

Mothers read this:

A CONSTIPATED child is so easily straightened out, it's a pity more mothers don't know the remedy.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. And today, there are fully a million families that will have no other kind in the house.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all readily for use at any drugstore.

Fake Fingerprints May Divert Police Suspicion

Fingerprints of different people, as we know, are never the same. But it is possible for a crook to imitate a genuine fingerprint so that the suspicion of the police can be diverted, says Pearson's Weekly.

How this can be done has been shown by Dr. Harold Cummins of the Tulane University of Medicine, Chicago. Taking an original genuine fingerprint, he had it engraved, and made a three dimensional negative in wax. Then he took a cast in gelatin on a dummy finger. Twelve of the 32 prints he made with the dummy finger were declared by fingerprint experts to be genuine.

Though this proportion is not very great, the United States authorities believe it is sufficient to allow criminals many opportunities to put the police on false trails.

Don't Entrust Your

Well-Being to Unknown
Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct. Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows her contempt for Garth.

The plane nosed down so steeply that the pontoons went under. Fortunately the craft was almost fool-proof. She bobbed up without plunging to the bottom. Huxby taxied shoreward against the current from the stream and the thrust of the down-gulch breeze.

Garth stood up to pilot the pilot. A clump of spruces stood a few yards in from the water-smoothed ledge on the right bank of the stream mouth. Huxby obeyed the signal to shut off the motor. As the propeller ceased to spin the plane glided in between the banks of the outrushing stream.

Uncoupling the line as he went, Garth ran out on the right wing. From the overhang he leaped down on the shelf ledge and bounded along it to the nearest spruce. The plane had already lost its headway and was starting to drift backwards in the swift outswirl of the stream.

The line tautened as Garth whipped it around the tree trunk. To make doubly safe, he used the last foot for a pair of half hitches. He knew what would happen if the plane should drift free with no pilot aboard.

Snubbed fast, the monoplane swung to the near bank and lay with the right-hand float snug against the polished waterline of the ledge. Huxby came out on the wing and jumped off to peer down the glassy slope of rock at the pontoon.

"Not so bad," he admitted. "I had the place picked out," Garth replied. "The rock is very slick. There'll be no need of fenders during our few hours' stay."

The engineer pilot shoved his goggles up on the front of his helmet. "How's that? 'Picked out,' you say. Been around airplanes, have you?"

"I know how rough stone will chafe a boat," Garth replied. "Your floats are a kind of canoe. Can you get Mr. Ramill and his daughter ashore by way of the wing?"

Miss Ramill called from the cabin: "Why didn't you pick a decent landing place, Vivian? We never can get ashore up this smooth sloping rock. The steps are no use. You'll have to make a gangway for Dad and me."

Garth vaulted upon the wing and walked in along it to the fuselage. The girl leaned from the big rear window of the cabin. "Give me your hand," Garth said. "I'll swing you up on the wing."

He knelt above her on the cabin roof and reached down. Her lips curled in a contemptuous smile.

"If that's the best you can do, I'll stay right here. I've no wish to go bathing."

"In that case, get out of the way. Your father wishes to see my prospect. I'll not waste time building a needless gangway."

She was the heiress to millions and had been reared in prodigious luxury. Never had she been treated so cavalierly as by this buckskin-clad prospector. She turned to her fiancé.

"Vivian, you heard the insolent fellow!"

Huxby grasped the wing tip to pull himself up. The girl's father spoke over her shoulder: "Stay where you are, Vivian. We're here to look at Garth's mine. He has agreed to help Lilith and me, ashore. If she prefers to remain aboard, she may do so."

The girl looked both surprised and angered. She drew back into the cabin. Her father thrust out his head from the window to look up at Garth.

"Won't it be more than you can manage? I weigh over two hundred."

For reply, Garth reached down. The portly millionaire hung in Garth's grasp almost like a dead weight. Yet Garth swung him bodily up and around on the wing.

He led the limping gentleman out to the far end, near the tip, and lowered him down upon the top of the ledge. Before he could follow, Miss Ramill called out to him: "Come back for me. It should be safe enough. You did not drop Dad."

Garth looked up the gulch, smiled, and went to swing the girl out of the window. Up on the wing she clutched his shoulder as if to steady herself. Her scarlet-smeared lips curved in a patronizing smile.

"You're wonderfully strong!"

"More knuck than muscle."

"Both! It was simply marvelous how you lifted Dad without losing your balance."

Out near the wing tip Garth drew her arm free from her clasp, caught her by the elbows, and lowered her into Huxby's upthrust hands.

She looked up and smiled. "So nice of you, old dear. Now, if you'll fetch a cup. I'm dying to try a drink of this delightful-looking milky water."

"The dying would be more apt to follow your drink," Garth replied. He sprang down beside her father. "Your milk is rock-floer ground off by the glacier. It's apt to be a dangerous drink. There's clear water where we're going."

He caught up his rifle, and set off aslant the easy upslope from the lake shore. The others followed after him, picking their way between the scraggy branches of the spruce trees. Before long the trees dwarfed down into timberline scrub.

"What an odd-colored stone!" The girl turned to stare resentfully at the desolate grandeur of the mountains across the valley. "Did you ever see such a horrible place? It's almost as bad as those ash-heaps mountains in the Mohave desert. Come along, Dad. Don't keep us here forever. This raw hole makes me sick."

Her father spoke irritably: "You wouldn't listen when I advised you to remain at Edmonton. Why didn't you stay in the cabin, instead of following me ashore?"

"Oh, tune off," she complained. "It's quite enough to've dragged myself out on this God-for-saken dirt pile. Even the berries are sour. I'm going back. There ought to be a dance program on somewhere. Only thing, can Vivian get me up into the cabin?"

He looked expectantly at Garth. The smile she gave him jerked the attention of her fiancé away from the purpose that had brought them ashore.

"I'll swing you aboard easy enough, Lilith," he said.

Garth spoke to him without a trace of amusement:

"If you ask me, I think this little walk to the mine would be good exercise for Miss Ramill. When I left here, last month, there was a she-grizzly with two cubs back along the lake shore. They may have gone off; maybe not. That pistol of yours wouldn't be of much use if you happened to blunder between the old lady and her young ones."

"You saw the beast, yet did not kill her," scoffed Huxby. "Pretty thin!"

"Not at all; she was quite fat. It happened, though, I had no need of meat or bear skins. Also, she was as willing as I was to live and let live, just so I kept away from her cubs."

Mr. Ramill started to overtake him. "Lead ahead, Garth. I came here to see your prospect, not to talk about shooting."

Garth went on, up aslant the tundra. When he came to where the smooth slope dropped into a shallow trough, a barkward glance showed the girl and Huxby loitering along behind her father. The portly millionaire came panting up beside Garth.

"Well?" he asked.

"There's my claim," Garth answered. "My lower stake is down at that cross dyke of gneiss, a thousand feet or so from the lake shore. The upper one stands about three hundred feet below those slide ledges. You could stake a claim above mine, but I doubt if you'd find pay dirt. There is none at all between the lower stake and the lake. The dyke stopped the downdrift of the alloy. I sampled several acres. Beginning at the grass roots and going down to frost, the dirt ran from five to ten dollars a pan. This trough is a placer pocket—a cache filled by the age-long downdrift from those disintegrated veins up the mountain. My claim covers all or nearly all the deposit, and it is worth several hundred thousand dollars, if not a million."

The cool certainty of Garth's statement compelled belief. Mr. Ramill's ruddy face went blank.

His daughter looked at Garth with a sudden change from boredom and disdain to an interest that verged on respect. Here was sensation—something new. The despised woody vagabond of the wilds was not a pauper, after all! It was like a play, the wandering beggar boy disclosing himself to be the true prince. He had said, "a million!"

Like the older man, Huxby had put on his poker face. He was not so successful, however, in keeping the glint out of his eyes. He had yet to make his fortune.

"So it's a million?" he scoffed. "No wonder you prospectors go crazy. Find a little placer you guess has some gold in it, and you think you've located a mint. Five to ten dollars a pan! Why, Jack, your metal wouldn't give you half a dollar a pan, even if your small percentage of gold was alloyed with silver, instead of lead."

Garth smiled. "My mistake bothering you to test that sample. Just chew on this, my friend: A good many sourdoughs might not be able to identify that gray-white metal. But only a chechaho would be unable to recognize that it is not galena or silver."

This silenced the engineer for the moment. Mr. Ramill favored Garth with his blandest smile.

"Technicians like Huxby are too apt to imagine that the rest of us know nothing. Now, admitting for the sake of the argument that your guess regarding the alloy is correct, suppose we sample your prospect."

For reply, Garth led down into the trough to where a moss-bedded spring trickled down from pool to pool. He stopped beside a shallow dugout, roofed with spruce branches, moss and dirt. Under it lay a small shovel and pickaxe, a worn gold pan, and a little aluminum cooking pot.

Garth turned to Huxby. "There's the pan. Get your samples and go to it."

"How do I know your holes aren't salted?"

"You don't know anything. Why not scratch down to gravel yourself? Or perhaps I salted all the trough, before I laid on this blanket of grass and moss."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "Mining engineers have to guard against fraud as well as error, Garth. I was salted once myself, in my calow days. Just to ease his professional conscience, suppose you clear gravel for us midway between here and the staked hole down there."

"That's my discovery stake," Garth replied. "Wasn't looking for gold in this trough. Just happened to notice the gray metal where the spring gush of the rill had torn the moss from the gravel. About my digging, I must beg to be excused. What if I should happen to drop a handful of that galena into the hole, when your expert was not looking?"

Ignoring the irony, Huxby pulled the shovel from the dugout shelter and gouged into a bed of moss. Mr. Ramill stooped his portly body to pick up the gold pan.

Huxby shoveled clear the moss and black humus from a space two feet or more square. He tossed aside a few stones the size of his fist, and took the gold pan from Mr. Ramill to load it with gravel. They went a few steps downslope to the edge of a lower pool.

None too deftly, Huxby dipped water into the pan and began to rotate the contents. After more than twice the time an old prospector would have needed for the operation, the mining engineer worked the pan clear of all except a spoonful of small dull nodules.

Miss Ramill had stretched out to bask in the summer warmth. With the upslant of the sun towards the noon of the nineteen-hour day, the breeze had died down. The calm brought a swarm of mosquitoes upslope from the lake shore. The girl put on her headnet, covered the unbooted part of her legs with caribou moss, and resumed her sun bath.

Out of the tail of his eye Garth watched Huxby and Mr. Ramill. When he saw the two get their net-draped heads together over the gold pan, he rose and went towards them. The tread of his moccasins was noiseless. Before the two noticed his approach, he stood looking down over their shoulders.

"Not half bad for a starter," he said. "At least five dollars in your first pan."

"Hardly that value," replied Mr. Ramill. "Admitting there is some platinum in this alloy, I am afraid you're a far too sanguine young man. Call it five per cent platinum and five of gold. That leaves ninety per cent of silver and lead, with of course traces of iridium and osmium."

"Yes, move the decimal point of your million three places to the left, Jack," said Huxby. "It brings your wonderful fortune down to a few thousands. To sluice this placer, freight out the alloy, and pay for separating the metals will leave slim profits. There may be none at all."

"Too bad you've had all your trouble for nothing," Garth replied. "I counted on your finding it a real strike—the first big platinum deposit located in North America."

Mr. Ramill rose to lay a consoling hand on his shoulder.

"Never mind, my boy. You'll recall what I told you about my encouraging worthy prospectors. I stand by that now. I will give you two thousand dollars for this prospect, and take the chance of getting back my money by large-scale placering."

"You're too generous," Garth protested. "I couldn't think of taking your money. In fact, I'll have to own up I had a little testing acid with me when I happened upon this gray alloy. So, as I do not believe in cheating, suppose we head back for the Mackenzie."

The millionaire mine buyer chuckled and clapped him on the back. "Boy, you're a whole lot less a fool than you look."

Huxby stared hard. Then, pocketing the alloy, he went for the shovel.

"Good idea," Garth said. "A pan from above Discovery, one below, and the same from three or four hundred feet out each side—they'll tell you whether or not it's merely a small pocket."

Without replying, Huxby set off up the trough. Mr. Ramill limped slowly after him.

Miss Ramill appeared to have fallen asleep. She lay still, protected by her net from the mosquitoes that tinged about her head.

Relieved from the company of his unpleasant travel mates, Garth stretched out like the girl. He thought of the vast length of time that had been required to erode the side of the mountain above him. Nature had spent ages in collecting these hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of precious alloy upon which he now lay basking. And he had chanced to stumble upon the treasure near the end of a trip of which exploration and adventure had been the prime motive and prospecting only a side issue. Now, by law, he was sole owner of all this wealth.

He thought of the two men upslope whom he had brought to share in his good fortune. They had thanked him by seeking to lie and cheat him out of it all. But that was the nature of far too many men. There was no reason to be surprised or angered. They had failed to outplay him with their stacked cards. He looked at a clump of alpine blossoms close beside his elbow, and smiled.

Upslope he heard the swirl of gravel in the gold pan. After a time the sound died out. His keen ear caught the dull tread of heavy feet on the turf.

Mr. Ramill turned toward Garth. "We will go back to the plane for lunch while considering the matter."

"Only for a short time," Huxby qualified. "I intend to return here for more sampling. No need of your troubling to join us."

Garth saw that his company was not wanted. "Thanks. I'm not hungry. Come to think, I'll go down to the lake and make sure my old lady grizzly isn't lurking in the bush."

"Your phantom bear," mocked Miss Ramill. "Watch out she doesn't make a ghost of you."

Under cover of his smile at the gibe, Garth caught the glance that passed between her father and Huxby. The girl had said it. "Watch out" was the word.

He swung down the trough with no sign of hurry. The length of his gliding stride made his movements appear leisurely. Without looking back, he slanted in among the scrubby spruces. A mass of the dense evergreens put him out of sight of the three chechahcos up on the open tundra. He turned sharp to the right. Midway down the brush-fringed lake shore, the tall spruces stood well spaced. He broke into a run.

A vista between the trees offered him a view upslope. He halted behind a screen of young aspens to look. The three had already reached the side of the trough. They started to hurry on aslant the mountainside. Lilith Ramill and Huxby had the girl's heavy-bodied father between them. They were helping him along twice as fast as he could have made it without their aid.

Alcohol in Body Cannot Ignite, Chemists Assert

According to popular belief, the body of a person soaked with alcohol is combustible. Cases of the spontaneous combustion of the body have been reported, especially in France, when the first instance of this kind is said to have happened in 1725.

The spontaneous burning of an alcohol-soaked body is a popular belief in Rumania, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Prof. A. Elfer of Cluj, in a lecture before the Hygienic society, is reported by the Bucharest correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association as saying that "in past centuries it was earnestly deemed possible that the alcohol laden breath of a tippler may catch fire from the glow of an oven or even from his own pipe."

In 1847, the Countess Gorlitz was said to have become ignited spontaneously in Darmstadt, Germany, and burned to death. A commission whose members included the greatest chemical experts of the age, Leibig and Bischoff, studied this case and completely refuted the theory of spontaneous combustion.

Silk Topper Is Doomed; Few Are Learning Trade

The silk hat, unlike its felt competitors, does not lend itself to mass production, notes a writer in Tit-Bits Magazine. Every "topper" is the skillful creation of several experts working in conjunction, who have served a long apprenticeship to the job. They are body-bakers, trimmers, finishers, and shapers. The body consists of a stiffened calico wound around a cylindrical block, and upon this the brim and top are ironed. The plush cover, cut to graded sizes, is sewn together with a diagonal seam, and placed over the body while hot. As it cools it contracts to a perfect fit. The finisher gives the silk hat its beautiful sheen, and the shaper curls the brim and puts in the lining.

The very fact that the "topper" is the production of experts tends to make its doom even more certain than it would otherwise be, for no youth is likely to enter upon a long apprenticeship to a dying trade, and thus the time will soon come when no one capable of making a silk hat will be left. At the present there remain only a few hundred of such men.

Now Science Explains Why So Many People Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping
Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot . . . "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more.

All you have to do is to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Mrs. T. Swisher, our president, opened the meeting with a reading about Armistice Day, after which several distinguished visitors were introduced. On account of so many visitors present, only the most pressing business was taken up.

On account of the Post giving a card and bunco party Friday evening, Nov. 22, our regular meeting will be changed to Monday Nov. 25. Members! Please remember this change in date.

The fashion show which we had planned on having, has been cancelled, inasmuch as the Evans Fur Co., who was to have put on this show, is completely booked up for the coming year.

Our membership chairman, Mrs. Brandau, introduced two more new members, and they were welcomed into the unit by our president.

The Rehabilitation chairman, Mrs. Freitag, read a report on the "Beano" party given the men at Orland last Thursday evening. All present enjoyed a good time.

Between reports, several songs were sung by the assembly, which helped to pep up the meeting.

The Americanism chairman, Mrs. West, read an article entitled "Armistice Day." She then introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. Roselle, 4th District Adjutant of the American Legion. He gave a very interesting talk on the celebration of Armistice Day.

Mr. George Rowden, 4th District Finance Officer of the American Legion, was then called on to say a Roy Gruntman, twenty-eight, garage owner of Stewardson, was killed when he was struck by an automobile.

Mrs. Christina Gandy, ninety-five, for 40 years a resident of Assumption, died at the home of her son, Frank, an Assumption business man.

James Carter, eighty-eight, one of the few remaining Civil war veterans of Shelby county, died at his home near Beecher City.

Mrs. Henry Becker, sixty-five, died at Marine from burns suffered when her dress caught fire while burning leaves.

The mangled body of a man killed by a C. B. & Q. train near Bushnell was identified as that of Frank Schreier of East Moline.

Former Gov. Joseph W. Fifer, Bloomington's distinguished citizen, observed his ninety-fifth birthday. He was able to be up after being confined to his bed for three weeks.

George Christman, twenty-seven-year-old Douglas county farmer, husked his way to the corn husking title of Douglas county by banking 37.39 bushels of corn in 80 minutes.

Herschel J. Blazer of Aledo was elected president of the Illinois Press association at the seventeenth annual convention in Champaign. He succeeded W. A. Jolley of Roodhouse.

Dr. Daniel Irion, president emeritus of Elmhurst college, identified closely with that institution since its founding in 1871, died in the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Prof. and Mrs. Paul N. Crusius, Elmhurst, after a week's illness. He was eighty years old.

Thomas T. Roberts, forty-one years old, a Chicago broker, was found shot to death in his car in a desolate section of Hiawatha woods, two and a half miles west of Deerfield, in Lake county. Chief of Police Perry McLaughlin of Deerfield said Roberts apparently had shot himself.

Further returns to depositors in the three months ended September 30 were made by three of the twenty closed banks for which State Auditor Edward J. Barrett issued statements of condition. These were the Elmwood Park State, Equitable Trust and Savings, and First State of Barrington. Two others, the First State of Steger and the Fullerton State, will make further repayments in the next two months. It was learned. A sixth bank, the Division State, has a proposed reorganization plan pending.

Robert J. Dunham, federal Works Progress administrator for Illinois, predicted that all employable persons on the relief rolls in the state would have WPA jobs by January 1. His prediction followed the approval by Controller General McCarl of 925 Illinois projects calling for federal grants of $40,343,078. Mr. McCarl made immediately available $9,933,189 of this sum and will turn over the remainder in periodical installments. The projects are expected to give work to 40,000 relief recipients.

At the annual meeting of the Dads' association of the University of Illinois in Urbana, A. W. Shipton, general manager of the Journal, Springfield, was elected president for next year. Dr. W. W. Cutter, Peoria, was named vice president, and Dr. Edwin Draper, Urbana, secretary-treasurer. Those elected members of the executive committee are: F. W. Schacht of Chicago, retiring president; Albert Triebel, and A. R. Knight, Urbana; P. L. Smithers, Wilmette; Charles Galbreath of Tuscola.

The deed for the Mount Pulaski courthouse to be used as an Abraham Lincoln shrine has been delivered to the state. The final transaction in the transfer of this historic building to the state of Illinois was completed when a check for $1 was received by City Clerk Charles Schmitz from the state treasurer for the block in which the courthouse is located. The building will be maintained as a Lincoln shrine and the grounds as a state park. The state will begin work on restoring the building to its original condition as soon as it is vacated. Five thousand dollars has been appropriated for the work, and $2,500 is available for the salary of a custodian, extra labor, and maintenance of buildings and grounds.

Henry J. (Midget) Fernekes, the astute little slayer who escaped from Joliet penitentiary on August 3 and was recaptured in Chicago October 27, kept the promise he had made to police that he never would go back to jail nor face another showup. He swallowed poison in his cell in the detective bureau and died 30 minutes later while being taken to the County hospital. He was thirty-eight years old. Fernekes accomplished his self-destruction despite precautions taken by the state's attorney's police and cell guards as a result of Fernekes' suicide threat. A small glass phial, which contained the remainder of the poison he had used, was found in a secret pocket in his trousers.

Dr. Walter H. Macpherson, pastor of the Joliet Universalist church, was elected president of the Universalist church at the concluding session of the church's biennial convention in Washington, D. C.

Members of the fifty-ninth general assembly of Illinois convened in special session by call of Governor Horner to consider social security and 17 other subjects. A total of 49 bills were introduced in the two houses, many of them pertaining to the New Deal's social security act to allow Illinois to take advantage of various parts of the law.

Lesson for November 17

THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm 124:1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Psalm 126:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A New Song.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Coming Home Rejoicing.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making a Fresh Start.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Thanksgiving for God's Care.

1. The Return Predicted (Jer. 29:1-14).

It seems that false prophets were flourishing in Babylon telling the people that they would speedily be restored to their own land. To counteract this the Lord moved Jeremiah to send this letter to the captives in Babylon (vv. 8, 9). In this letter he advised them to settle down and quietly pursue their regular callings of life and not to be led astray by the false prophets (vv. 6, 7).

1. The length of the captivity (v. 10). Their coming back was to be "after seventy years." From Daniel 9:2 it is clear that seventy years means a definite time. It dates from the time when the first company was taken captive, among which Daniel was found.

2. Recovered by God (vv. 10-14). God's purpose in the captivity was to cure them of their idolatrous practices. He assured them that when his purpose was accomplished he would visit them and convince them of his good purpose toward them. Their captivity he would turn away, gather them from all the nations, and bring them into their own land.

II. The Predicted Captivity Fulfilled (Ezra 1:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus (vv. 1-4).

a. This was not by accident, but that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled (v. 1). What God has promised he will do; he never forgets.

b. By divine initiation (v. 1). "The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus." How this was done we do not know. Possibly Daniel brought to his attention the prophecy of Isaiah and Jeremiah (Isa. 44:28; Jer. 25:12). Every impulse to do good in all men is caused by the Lord. It may have been that Cyrus only saw his own action as a piece of statecraft—the creation of a buffer nation between his kingdom and that of Egypt.

c. The content of his proclamation (vv. 2-4).

(1) "The Lord God of heaven hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem" (v. 2). This makes clear that he had some impression of God's hand upon him.

(2) Appeal to Jewish patriotism (v. 3). He invokes upon such as possess the national religious feeling, the blessing of God, and commands them to go and build the house of the Lord God.

(3) Lend assistance (v. 4). Many of the Jews were established in business and therefore were not free to go. Many, no doubt, had lost their national spirit and therefore did not desire to go. All such were to lend friendly assistance in silver, gold, and beasts.

2. The response to Cyrus' proclamation (vv. 5, 6). The chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and Levites presented themselves as willing and ready to go. The company which returned was largely made up of representatives of Judah and Benjamin.

3. The royal favor (vv. 7-11). Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away from Jerusalem and put into the house of his gods. Now to have 5,400 of these vessels returned to their owners and sent back to Jerusalem to be put to their original use, met a hearty response by the Jews.

III. The Gladness and Rejoicing of the Returning Exiles (Ps. 126:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus as a dream (v. 1). They recognized that their going back was through the favor of the Lord.

2. Their laughter and singing (vv. 2, 3). They not only recognized this as the favor of the Lord upon them, but testified thereof in the hearing of the heathen round about them.

3. Their prayer for prosperity in the land (v. 4). They were not only going back with the consciousness of the good hand of the Lord upon them, but were trusting him for fruitfulness of the land.

4. Sowing in tears (vv. 5, 6). The seed which they were to sow in the land was so precious that they seemed to have hesitated as to sowing, and yet they recognized that joy would follow their sorrow as they brought with them the sheaves of the harvest.

Monotony

Whether we are rich or poor, we all have to fight against monotony—doing the same thing over and over until it loses interest.

We can fight monotony with variety, and one way to do this is by making a wise use of leisure. If we wish to avoid the feeling that we are merely machines, we must become interested in many things.

Patience

Patience is bitter, but its fruit sweet.—Rousseau.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

PILLARS OF GOLD

WHEN the Spanish conquerors were following the northward windings of the Rio Grande, they went as far as the northern part of what is now New Mexico. Here, Spanish legend relates, some of the padres, with soldiers at their command, turned to the westward. In the midst of some extremely rough mountains they came across a small valley, and here they saw two great pillars made of large stones.

What these pillars were they did not know, but with the curiosity to which we owe so much of our information about the early southwest, the padres halted to examine these monuments. To their surprise and delight, they found that some of the stones were pieces of rich gold ore, which argued that their source must be somewhere in the vicinity.

So it proved; the lode was rich beyond all dreams, and the party immediately set to work, the soldiers laying down their arms to become miners. They remained in the hidden valley long enough to take out all the gold they could carry with them.

After this time, others who passed that way hunting wealth saw the lonely pillars in the center of the valley, but for a long time no one thought to examine them, and consequently passed on without knowing that their opportunity lay near by, and that a few hours searching might disclose that mine that the padres saw.

At last an old miner by the name of Mike O'Leary, rambling about through this region on a prospecting trip, found the ancient workings, and appeared in Parrot City some time later with enough ore to finance an expensive spree for several weeks. After sobering up he disappeared, only to come into Animas City several months later with more ore.

The old prospector of the western mountains was a wily creature. He preferred hunting alone or with one partner, and if he did strike gold he could be "as mum as a clam" about its location, even though he loved to boast about his good fortune. Knowing the hills as he did the streets of his home town, he usually eluded all those who tried to follow him. He knew only too well that the discovery of his mine would mean a lot of unpleasant neighbors, the theft of his ore, and possibly death to himself. The silence of the old prospectors on the subject of their finds is one of the large factors in the losing of mines.

O'Leary was just such a man. He might show up every now and then with enough gold to pay for a celebration, but he always drifted out of sight before anyone could see where he went. Finally he disappeared for good—nothing more was seen of him, and it is supposed that either he went to some distant city to spend his money, or else the mountains claimed him for the final sacrifice.

With O'Leary's passing, however, the secret of his mine did not remain a secret. Once in a while some miner comes to the front with ore which he claims came from that little valley in the mountains, and there are even said to be maps, made by others who came into sight of the two rock pillars. However, as far as anyone knows, the location of the mine has never been filed as a claim.

SECRET OF THE PRAIRIE

COUNCIL OF WAR!

A party of freighters camped under an old lightning killed cottonwood, talking earnestly. The year was 1856; the place was Kearney county, Kansas, on the Santa Fe trail. There was $70,000 in Spanish gold in that wagon train, being carried from Mexico to Fort Leavenworth. Would it ever reach its destination?

Indians had begun to follow the wagons in New Mexico. They hung on, making no move to attack, but drawing a little closer day by day. Now, as the freighters consulted with each other around the campfire, the Indians lurked out yonder in the darkness, waiting—waiting—

It was decided to bury the gold. Here, where the great dead tree formed a landmark on the trail, was as good a place as any, and there was no time to lose. There was no telling when the Indians might make up their minds to attack.

It was midnight. The full moon shone brightly on the camp and on the cottonwood, and cast a shadow along the ground. Here, where the shadow fell, they buried the Spanish gold.

Next day they moved on. The Indians followed as usual, drawing a little closer. Three days later they attacked, when the train had reached Pawnee Rock. Only one man survived; he reached Fort Leavenworth, told his story, and died.

There was no chance, just then, to send out after the gold. It was safe; it must wait until the opportunity presented. And so a year passed before a party set out on the Santa Fe trail to recover the hidden coin.

But during that year lightning had struck the old cottonwood again, and this time had destroyed it completely. There was nothing left to show where it stood. Only the tall buffalo grass rippled in the wind—grass which had grown closely over all the countryside

Country Stores Keep in Line
With Advances of the Nation

Any thought that the coming first of rural free delivery and then of the automobile and the wider range the automobile gives its users has done away with what city people call the "crossroads store" is discounted by a writer in the Nation's Business. This writer, Charles M. Wilson, sings in high praise of the 225,000 independently operated merchandising establishments of the country, situated either at the crossroads or in villages of 500 or less, and credits them with an annual trade volume varying from $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000.

That indicates very clearly that the country store has not been nor is it a dying institution, in spite of our preconceived opinions that it should have been on its last legs these many years of good roads and easy highway transportation.

The crossroads and village stores saw to that by improving their stocks and methods of merchandising and meeting competition as competition developed. So the scales were kept in balance apparently. The writer does not give any comparative statistics of country merchants now and before the automobile era and does not discuss what the coming of rural free delivery and the elimination of thousands of purely rural post offices may have done to the crossroads merchant. He merely discusses the up-and-coming methods of country merchants that serve to keep them in line with the advances of the country at large.

Not that there have been no changes, for of course there have. In the last 30 years many unit general merchandise stores situated along highways in the open country and at crossroads have no doubt folded up and their trade transferred to the nearest village. But the better roads and greater travel have also encouraged new ventures in retailing. Eating places and small groceries, filling and service stations have found their places along the highways and new communities established, each much better and probably doing more business than the poorest of the old crossroads stores they replace. They had to be better and offer more service and variety or there would have been no purpose in their erection.

The 1930 census showed that there

PURPOSE

Purpose is one of the outstanding qualities of character and which colors personality with an unmistakable sheen. It draws everything worthwhile in life to it. Sincerity is manifested in action, associations are richer, will-power is increased, self-confidence developed, memory is more retentive, concentration easier—all from the inception of one thing.

This reflects the importance of the sixth of the total that are to be found at the crossroads and in villages of 500 and less that are in competition with larger retail establishments and that are credited by Mr. Wilson with doing one-sixteenth to one-twelfth of the retail business of the nation. For they have to be good to make such a mark.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

Miss Doig's front board is very attractively decorated with a Pilgrim scene. The back board has Thanksgiving scenes. A Pilgrim room is illustrated and an Indian village has been constructed in the sand table.

Jean Stark of the second grade has been ill the past week.

The baseball spelling contest is still going on in the primary room. The other day the Cubs beat the Sox 5 to 0. We all hope the Sox have better luck next time.

Miss Doig attended homecoming at Champaign. The main attraction was the Michigan-Illinois football game.

Bobby and Calvin Barenz have left for a trip to California. Word has been received that they were in an automobile accident but fortunately, not injured.

Lois Guindon entered the intermediate room. Lois came from Tinley Park and with her enrollment, now has 54 pupils under her instructions.

The intermediate room also has attractive Thanksgiving scenes across the front board. In the back of the room they have other appropriate pictures for the month of November and some of the pupils out-

The eighth grade Geography class have been making an extensive study of the fisheries and forests of the United States.

The Junior High School Room received a book rack as a gift with their new set of encyclopedia.

Some of the Junior Hi and High School girls have been enjoying basketball practise this past week.

The Sophomore History class has chosen names for their "did you know" teams. The names chosen were: "The Little Philosophers" and "Historical Fact Society".

There is soon to be a school paper edited and a contest is going to be held for the students to see who can submit the best name for this paper.

Doris Coler brought some gold nuggets to school and they were on display in the Jr. H. S. room.

FEATURES

The P.T.A. is awarding a trophy to the room that is represented by the most parents at the meetings which are held in the school. The trophy is very beautiful and well worth working for.

This week Arnold Bertelsen, Leonard Bertelsen and Howard Jungles were interviewed. Arnold was interviewed first and these are his answers. What is your age? 15. What grade are you in? I'm in the 10th grade. Have you always attended the Moena school? No I have not. Have you ever played on another basketball team besides Mokena? No. What position do you play? I play guard.

Leonard Bertelsen: I'm 16 years old and a sophomore in high school. I have attended other schools but have never played on another basketball team. My position is center.

Howard Jungles: Howard is nearly 16 and is in the sophomore class. He attended a country school before coming to Mokena and he has never played on any team beside ours. His position is, we found, forward.

The teachers were also interviewed this week. The questions they were asked were: What were you doing 20 years ago and what do you think you'll be doing 20 years from now?

From Miss Doig we learned that she was starting first grade and that in 20 years she plans to attend her mother's and father's golden wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Ferguson was going to school 20 years ago and we found that she intends to be taking it easy and enjoying life 20 years in the future.

Miss Krusemark was going to school but 20 years from now she hopes to enjoy good reading and doing lots of things she hasn't time for now.

Miss Vail was attending kindergarten 20 years ago but she said that at the rate that she is going now, she expects to be dead by the time 20 more years have passed.

Mr. Dunn, 20 years ago, was in the 4th grade and was on the side lines watching the bigger boys play basketball and playing whenever he had a chance. He states that 20 years from now he expects to retire on a government pension.

SPORTS

Don't forget that there is a big basketball game to be played in the Mokena gym Nov. 15 between Mokena and Beecher. This the boys first game at home and we hope that everyone will turn out to boost the boys.

ENTERS 53rd YEAR

The Christian Home Orphanage
Council Bluffs, Iowa, has entered its Fifty-third year of continuous service in behalf of homeless, destitute children and dependent aged women.

During this more than half a century, its doors have never been closed, day or night. It has been a refuge for thousands of little children from all parts of the country, who have been tenderly cared for,
trained and educated, placed in fine private families, and who have become useful honorable citizens.
Such works as this are greatly needed in days like these, and their value to mankind cannot be estimated.

The Christian Home Orphanage,
during all these years, has been carried on and built up to its present great size, by the voluntary contributions of good people from all sections of the country.

It has not been easy the past several years, although the appeals for help during these trying times have been more numerous and more urgent than ever before.

Now, with times and conditions growing better, the Home is earnestly and necessarily appealing to the people for funds to carry on its work during the winter months, and especially for gifts as liberal as possible for the annual Thanksgiving and Christmas offerings to the Home.

The work is really in great need of help, and whatever you can do will be appreciated.

Please send all contributions to
the Christian Home Orphanage, Council Bluffs, Iowa. The same will be duly acknowledged and credited in the official publication of the Institution, a copy of which will be mailed to you.
